Essay Questions

39. Distinguish between prejudice and discrimination and then explain the relationship between them using Merton's typology.

Answer: Prejudice is a belief or attitude; discrimination is action. Discrimination is the denial of opportunities and equal rights to individuals and groups because of prejudice or for other arbitrary reasons. Unlike prejudice, discrimination involves behavior that excludes members of a group from certain rights, opportunities, or privileges. Like prejudice, it is categorical, except for a few rare exceptions.

In exploring the relationship between negative attitudes and negative behavior, sociologist Robert Merton identified four major categories. The label added to each of Merton's categories may more readily identify the type of person described:

1. The unprejudiced nondiscriminator—or all-weather liberal
2. The unprejudiced discriminator—or reluctant liberal
3. The prejudiced nondiscriminator—or timid bigot
4. The prejudiced discriminator—or all-weather bigot

Learning Objective: 2.1: Differentiate between prejudice and discrimination.

Topic: Prejudice and Discrimination

Skill Level: Understand the Concepts

Difficulty: Moderate

40. Define White privilege and explain how it is invisible to those who benefit from it. Provide specific examples of privileges based on race.

Answer: White privilege refers to the rights or immunities granted as a particular benefit or favor for being White. This advantage exists unconsciously and is often invisible to the White people who enjoy it. Being White or being successful in establishing a White identity carries with it distinct advantages. Among those that McIntosh (1988) identified were the following:

- Being considered financially reliable when using checks, credit cards, or cash
- Taking a job without having coworkers suspect it came about because of race
- Never having to speak for all the people of an individual's race
- Watching television or reading a newspaper and seeing people of one's own race widely represented
- Speaking effectively in a large group without being called a credit to a person's race
- Assuming that if legal or medical help is needed, a person's race will not work against him or her

Typically, White people do not see themselves as privileged in the way many African Americans and Latinos see themselves as disadvantaged. Privilege for many White people may be easy to exercise in one's life, but it is difficult to acknowledge.

Learning Objective: 2.2: Explain White privilege.

Topic: White Privilege

Skill Level: Remember the Facts

Difficulty: Easy

41. How is economics related to the formation of prejudice as explained by both the exploitation and scapegoating theories?

Answer: People use some expressions of prejudice so they can blame others and refuse to accept responsibility. Scapegoating theory says that prejudiced people believe they are society's victims. Today in the United States, both legal and illegal immigrants often are blamed by "real Americans" for their failure to secure jobs or desirable housing. The immigrant becomes the scapegoat for one's own lack of skills, planning, or motivation. It is so much easier to blame someone else.

The exploitation theory is clearly part of the Marxist tradition in sociological thought. Karl Marx emphasized exploitation of the lower class as an integral part of capitalism. Similarly, the exploitation or conflict approach explains how racism can stigmatize a group as inferior to justify the exploitation of that group. As developed by Oliver Cox (1942), exploitation theory saw prejudice against Blacks as an extension of the inequality faced by the entire lower class. Both the enslavement of African Americans and the removal westward of Native Americans were to a significant degree economically motivated.

Learning Objective: 2.3: Summarize the theories of prejudice.

Topic: Theories of Prejudice

Skill Level: Understand the Concepts

Difficulty: Moderate

42. Explain how stereotypes can be related to real conditions and yet not apply to most people within a particular minority group.

Answer: Stereotypes are unreliable generalizations about all members of a group and do not take individual differences into account. Numerous scientific studies have been made of these exaggerated images. This research has shown the willingness of people to assign positive and negative traits to entire groups of people, which are then applied to particular individuals. Stereotyping causes people to view Blacks as superstitious, Whites as uncaring, and Jews as shrewd. If stereotypes are exaggerated generalizations, then why are they so widely held, and why are some traits assigned more often than others? Evidence for traits may arise out of real conditions. For example, more Puerto Ricans live in poverty than Whites, so a prejudiced individual associates Puerto Ricans with laziness. According to the New Testament, some Jews were responsible for the crucifixion of Jesus, so, to the prejudiced mind, all Jews are Christ killers. Some activists in the women's movement are lesbians, so all feminists are seen as lesbians. From a kernel of fact, faulty generalization creates a stereotype.

Learning Objective: 2.4: Define and explain stereotyping.

Topic: Stereotypes

Skill Level: Understand the Concepts

Difficulty: Moderate

43. Discuss the important aspects of color-blind racism.

Answer: An important aspect of color-blind racism is the recognition that race is rarely invoked in public debates on social issues. Instead, people emphasize lower social class, the lack of citizenship, or illegal aliens; these descriptions serve as proxies for race. Furthermore, the emphasis is on individuals failing rather than on recognizing patterns of groups being disadvantaged. This leads many White people to declare they are not racist and that they do not know anyone who is racist. It also leads to the mistaken conclusion that more progress has been made toward racial and ethnic equality and even tolerance than has really taken place.

Learning Objective: 2.5: Discuss how members of subordinate groups respond to prejudice.

Topic: Color-Blind Racism

Skill Level: Understand the Concepts

Difficulty: Moderate

44. How do different minority groups feel about the state of race relations in the United States?

Answer: The results of a nationwide survey conducted in the United States offer insight into sharply different views on the state of race relations today. Latinos, African Americans, and Asian Americans all have strong reservations about the state of race relations in the United States. They are skeptical about the level of equal opportunity and perceive a lot of discrimination. It is interesting to note that Hispanics and Asian Americans, overwhelmingly immigrants, are more likely to feel they will succeed if they work hard. Yet the majority of all three groups have a positive outlook for the next ten years.

Learning Objective: 2.6: Discuss how members of subordinate groups respond to prejudice.

Topic: The Mood of the Oppressed

Skill Level: Understand the Concepts

Difficulty: Moderate

45. What is the evidence of intergroup hostility between minority groups? What explanations are offered for exploited and oppressed groups perceiving one another with hostility and suspicion?

Answer: Prejudice is as diverse as the nation's population. It exists not only between dominant and subordinate peoples but also among specific subordinate groups. Often, low-income people compete daily with other low-income people and do not readily see the larger societal forces that contribute to their low status. A survey results reveal that many Hispanics are more likely to believe Asian Americans are getting in their way than the White Americans who are the real decision makers in their community. Most troubling is when intergroup hostility becomes violent. Ethnic and racial tensions among African Americans, Latinos, and immigrants may become manifest in hate crimes. Violence can surface in neighborhoods where people compete for scarce resources such as jobs and housing.

Learning Objective: 2.7: Discuss how members of subordinate groups respond to prejudice.

Topic: Intergroup Hostility

Skill Level: Understand the Concepts

Difficulty: Moderate

46. William Corporation is motivated to decrease prejudice and stereotyping among its employees. What approach would have the most lasting impact on the workers and the organization?

Answer: In an effort to improve workplace relations, most organizations have initiated some form of diversity training. These programs are aimed at eliminating circumstances and relationships that cause groups to receive fewer rewards, resources, or opportunities. Typically, programs aim to reduce ill-treatment based on race, gender, and ethnicity. In addition, diversity training may deal with age, disability, religion, and language as well as other aspects, including citizenship status, marital status, and parental status.

Research into different corporate policies has found two that are particularly effective. Diversity task forces that bring together people from different departments to brainstorm about opening up hiring opportunities appear to eventually increase the diversity in upper management. A second successful policy is the diversity mentoring programs designed for aspiring women and minorities, as well as White men, to achieve their career goals.

47. Explain the empirical measurement of social distance.

Answer: Emory Bogardus (1968) conceptualized a scale that could measure social distance empirically. His social distance scale is so widely used that it is often called the Bogardus scale. The scale asks people how willing they would be to interact with various racial and ethnic groups in specified social situations. The situations describe different degrees of social contact or social distance. The items used, with their corresponding distance scores, follow. People are asked whether they would be willing to work alongside someone or be a neighbor to someone of a different group, and, showing the least amount of social distance, be related through marriage. Over the 70-year period in which the tests were administered, certain patterns emerged. In the top third of the hierarchy are White Americans and northern Europeans. Held at greater social distance are eastern and southern Europeans, and generally near the bottom are racial minorities.

48. What are the strategies that can be used by individuals to fight prejudice?

Answer:

1. Act. Do something. In the face of hatred, apathy will be taken as acceptance, even by the victims of prejudice themselves.
2. Unite. Call a friend or coworker. Organize a group of like-thinking friends from school or a place of worship or club. Create a coalition that is diverse and includes the young, the old, law enforcement representatives, and the media.
3. Support the victims. Victims of hate crimes are especially vulnerable. Let them know they are cared for by words, in person, or by e-mail. If a friend is a victim, report it.

4. Do the required homework. If it appears that a hate crime has been committed, do research to document it.
5. Create an alternative. Never attend a rally where hate is a part of the agenda. Find another outlet for releasing frustration, whatever the cause.
6. Speak up. Each person has First Amendment rights. Denounce the hatred, the cruel jokes. If a news organization is misrepresenting a group, speak up.
7. Lobby leaders. Persuade policymakers, business heads, community leaders, and executives of media outlets to take a stand against hate.
8. Look long term. Participate or organize events such as annual parades or cultural fairs to celebrate diversity and harmony. Supplement it with a website that can be a 24/7 resource.
9. Teach acceptance. Prejudice is learned, and parents and teachers can influence the content of curriculum. In a first-grade class in Seattle, children paint self-portraits, mixing colors to match their skin tone.
10. Dig deeper. Look into the issues that divide people—social inequality, immigration, and sexual orientation. Work against prejudice. Dig deep inside for prejudices and stereotypes that may be embraced. Find out what is happening and act!
