ESSAY QUESTIONS

46. Explain why the property-owning elite, in the 1780s, were convinced that a strong national government was essential for the country to flourish.

Answer: The ideal answer should include:

1. The Articles of Confederation had a number of weaknesses, which, by all accounts, were apparent to the framers.
2. The weaknesses of the Articles made the propertied elite (the Founding Fathers) concerned about instability. Instability threatened the country and the founders' properties and interests. The founders were concerned about foreign invasion, economic decline, and mob rule, all of which spelled trouble for the interests of the elite.
3. Since instability manifested itself during Shays's Rebellion in late 1786, the founders' fears of mob rule were reinforced. Having a strong national government was seen as a way of preventing further instability.

Learning Objective: 2.1 Trace the development of the U.S. Constitution, identifying historical events and leaders.

47. Explain what the author means when he asserts that the debates at the Constitutional Convention were between the "haves" and the "have-nots" over their regional interests, and not between the "haves" and the "have-nots."

Answer: The ideal answer should include:

1. The delegates possessed a blend of experience and learning. They were not representative of the population—they were elites.
2. As propertied elite, the framers were looking out for their own interests. They wanted to avoid instability and rebellion.

48. Are there any drawbacks to having a system of checks and balances and separation of powers? Please explain.

Answer: The ideal answer should include:

1. Separation of powers is the principle that the powers of government should be divided and put in the care of different parts of the government. In practice, this principle is likely to make the legislative branch supreme. This is because the legislature can determine the roles that the other branches play.
2. Checks and balances create a mixture of powers that permits the three branches of government to limit one another. This can make policymaking very slow and can even lead to government gridlock.

Learning Objective: 2.2 Explore the four major constitutional principles.

Topic: Separation of Powers and Checks and Balances

Skill Level: Analyze It

Difficulty Level: Moderate

49. Why are there debates over “modern federalism”?

Answer: The ideal answer should include:

1. Modern federalism is a mix of overlapping relations between the states and the federal government.
2. This blending of relations raises questions such as:
 - Should we limit the power of the federal government? And if so, how?
 - Are local and state governments closer to the people, and do they produce better policies than the national government? If so, should we shift more responsibility to the local levels?
 - What are the limits of states’ autonomy?
