In this revision of the test bank, I have updated all of the questions to reflect changes in Social Problems, 8th edition. This chapter test bank provides fifty multiple-choice questions and five essay questions. The multiple-choice questions are coded for level of difficulty (easy, moderate, or difficult). The multiple-choice questions are also coded for the level of reasoning involved. The four levels of reasoning are Remember the Facts (recalling factual material), Understand the Concepts (understanding key concepts), Apply What You Know (applying sociological knowledge to a situation), and Analyze the Issue (identifying the interrelationship among variables).

Essay Questions

51. How are age, race, ethnicity, and gender related to the risk of being poor? Provide data in support of your assertions.

- The age category at greatest risk of poverty is children, who make up one-third of the U.S. poor. In 2016, 13.35 million (almost one in five) of people under eighteen were living in poor households.
- African Americans, Hispanics, and Asian Americans are at higher risk of being poor than whites. While more white people than black people and Hispanic people are poor, the percentage of minority people who are poor is higher than that of whites. In 2016, 22 percent of African Americans (9.28 million people), 19.4 percent of Hispanics (11.1 million people), and 10.1 percent of Asian Americans (1.9 million people) were poor, compared to 8.8 percent of non-Hispanic whites (17.2 million people).

52. Sketch a brief history of welfare in the United States, including the colonial era, the early industrial era, and the twentieth century. What changed with the 1996 welfare reforms? What do you make of our nation’s response to poverty?

- The early American colonists looked down on the poor as morally weak and undeserving; “welfare” was limited to acts of personal kindness between kin and neighbors.
- The Industrial Revolution encouraged individualism and self-reliance. The public criticized charity as a misguided policy that would end up reducing people’s need to work and encourage them to become lazy. Organizations such as the Salvation Army offered food and shelter to the poor along with moral instruction.
- 1870s: Scientific charity movement began studying what categories of people were poor, why people were poor, and what could be done to help them.

- 1930s: During the Great Depression, Roosevelt's New Deal included the Works Progress Administration and Social Security.
- 1960s: Lyndon Johnson launched the War on Poverty program.
- 1980s–present: Reagan administration began a conservative backlash against welfare leading to the 1996 Welfare Reform Act.
