103. Describe how human resources planning is integrated with strategic planning.

ANSWER: Through strategic planning, organizations set major objectives and develop plans to achieve those objectives.

HRP provides a set of inputs that determine what is or is likely to be possible, given the number of available people, training needs, and other people-related issues. HR strategies and action plans are developed according to the overall strategic goals that evolve from the strategy formulation process. During the strategy implementation phase, HRP must make resource allocation decisions, and implement policy, practices, and training that support the decisions and outcomes of the strategic planning process.

104. Describe the three key elements of the HRP model.

ANSWER: The three key elements in the HR planning process are (1) forecasting demand, (2) forecasting supply, and (3) balancing supply and demand considerations.

Forecasting demand involves estimating in advance the number and type of people needed to meet organizational objectives. It may involve a quantitative approach using statistical analysis and mathematical models or a qualitative approach focusing on employee performance and promotability.

Forecasting supply determines if there are sufficient numbers and types of employees available to staff anticipated openings. Sources of supply can be external or internal.

HR planning should strive for a proper balance between the emphasis placed on demand considerations and that placed on supply considerations. Demand considerations are based on the forecast of trends in business activity. Supply considerations involve the determination of where and how candidates with the required qualifications are to be found to fill vacancies.

105. Identify and briefly describe three strategies that managers frequently use to cope with a labour shortage.

ANSWER: (1) Overtime (i.e., asking employees to work extra hours) is a strategy used by most firms during peak periods.

(2) Increasingly, organizations are using part-time employees to increase flexibility in scheduling and reducing payroll costs. Many organizations use part-time or contract employees to cover the absences of regular, full-time employees. (3) In addition, nine out of ten Canadian companies—both large and small—make some use of temporary employees. “Temps” are typically used for short-term assignments, vacation fill-ins, for peak work periods, or to cover for employees taking sick leave, pregnancy leave, and so forth.

106. Explain how the balanced scorecard can be used by HR professionals in measuring a firm’s strategic alignment?

ANSWER: The balanced scorecard (BSC) can be used by HR professionals to map a firm’s strategy to ensure strategic alignment. The BSC is a framework that helps managers translate their firm’s strategic goals into operational objectives. The model has four related cells: (1) financial, (2) customer, (3) processes, and (4) learning.

Chapter 2 - Strategy and Human Resources Planning

The logic behind BSC is firmly rooted in HRM. People management and learning help organizations improve their internal processes and provide excellent customer service. Internal processes—product development, service, and the like—are critical for creating customer satisfaction and loyalty; they are also important for ensuring productivity to contain costs for better financial performance. Customer value creation, in turn, drives up revenues, which enhances profitability.

At Starbucks, for example, key metrics can be used to help translate strategic goals to operational imperatives. For instance, under customer metrics, Starbucks might look at the percentage of repeat customers, the number of new customers, and growth rate. Under people metrics, HR professionals might measure the numbers of suggestions provided by employees, participation in Starbucks' stock-sharing program, employee turnover, and training hours spent. Each of these cells links vertically. HR management issues such as rewards, training, and suggestions can be linked to efficient processes (e.g., brewing the perfect cup, delivering top-notch customer service). These processes then lead to better customer loyalty and growth. Growth and customer loyalty in turn lead to higher profitability and market value.
