<question type="mc">

1. Why is "traditional religion" an ambiguous term for the religions dealt with in this chapter?
 - a. Most people don't know what "traditional" means.
 - b. Not very many scholars use it today.
 - c. All religions are traditions because they are handed down from the past.
 - d. This term is used only of very old religions.

Analysis:

- a. Incorrect. All religions are traditions, because they are comprehensive systems that come from the past. See 2-1: Names for This Type of Religion
- b. Incorrect. All religions are traditions, because they are comprehensive systems that come from the past. See 2-1: Names for This Type of Religion
- c. Correct. All religions are traditions, because they are comprehensive systems that come from the past, so this makes calling only some of them "traditional" confusing. See 2-1: Names for This Type of Religion
- d. Incorrect. All religions are traditions, because they are comprehensive systems that come from the past. See 2-1: Names for This Type of Religion
