43) Explain the process of developing a mission statement.

Answer: A widely used approach to developing a mission statement is first to select several articles about mission statements and then to ask all managers to read these as background information. Then managers themselves are asked to prepare a mission statement for the organization. A facilitator or committee of top managers should then merge these statements into a single document and distribute this draft mission statement to all managers. A request for modifications, additions and deletions is needed next, along with a meeting to revise the document. To the extent that all managers have input into and support the final mission statement document, organizations can more easily obtain managers' support for other strategy formulation, implementation and evaluation activities.

Answer: The mission statement should reflect the anticipations of customers. Rather than developing a product and then trying to find a market, the operating philosophy of organizations should be to identify customers' needs and then provide a product or service to fulfill those needs. Good mission statements also identify the utility of a firm's products to its customers. A major reason for developing a business mission statement is to attract customers who give meaning to an organization.
